

Retail Market Review Response

Those of us who live in rural areas and don't have the option of gas are penalised all ways.

1. Discrimination because there is no gas so we can't get such good electricity prices as customers who have the option of a dual fuel tariff.
2. No regulation of oil prices so we can be charged scandalously high prices at the whim of the suppliers

It is time these unfair practices were stamped out by proper regulation of ALL energy suppliers.

I live in Lincolnshire where there are a large number of households who don't have access to gas supplies and a recent report says that approximately ONE THIRD of the population live in fuel poverty because of it. We have certainly had to put up with being much colder this winter because we are trying to use less oil because of the price of it.

Once again rural communities are penalised because we don't conform to the ways of the towns.
