

As a Crofter in West Mainland, I object to the construction of a forest of giant wind turbines that studies show to have a detrimental impact on wildlife. It is quite clear that a small number of individuals will benefit... at the expense of a gross eyesore. Sadly, it is also clear that opposition is from those who live here, not least because we are the ones whose lives will be affected... and as for the money into local community projects, money isn't everything. Oh, and the Scottish government doesn't give a stuff about us because we don't vote for them, unlike the Western Isles - now there's a thing! Please stop this.
(Fat chance given that we are poor and those who want it are rich.)

Yours,
