

To whom it may concern,

I object to the proposed interconnector cable and wind farm being built on Shetland.

I do not believe this investment would provide value for money to consumers. The recent proposal for a new LNG power station on Shetland would provide far better value to consumers and ensure greater security of power to the people of Shetland.

This project would have a massive impact to the environment in Shetland with much of the area currently covered by peat, something I do not believe Viking have adequately investigated or mitigated against.

This project has already caused huge division in the community and does not have the support of the majority.

The local authorities failure to hold a public inquiry into this project, repeated breaches of conditions by the developer and the Lairds rights crushing those of local crofters means this project is likely to be the subject of legal challenges for years to come.
