

POLICY CONSULTATION RESPONSE 4

Would it be possible to put a price cap on none domestic rates? We live in a park home and our site owner shops around to find us the best deal then he sells it on to us. Last year our unit price went up from just over 15p to 82p. This was a huge increase and wasn't the fault of our site owner as it was the only deal he could get. We have since got a new tariff of 39p a unit which is better but it is only fixed until October when our site owner will get another contract. If these unit prices were fixed so that suppliers cannot charge such high amounts as 82p a unit and were more in line with the unit price that domestic users pay then it would be much better for all park home owners.

It is very worrying when you have no control over what you pay for utilities. When we were in a house and chose our own supplier, we could shop around ourselves for the best deal.

Thankyou
