

'Gas safety reserve requirements': An Ofgem meeting - London

Following on from recent Uniform Network Code modification proposals and concerns raised by market participants and interested parties in relation to the safety monitor arrangements, Ofgem has recently highlighted its intention to chair a meeting in relation to gas safety reserve arrangements. The purpose of this meeting would be to enable market participants and interested parties to discuss these arrangements and to focus on possible revisions which could be made ahead of next winter. To this end, Ofgem will be chairing a meeting on the morning of Monday 16 January 2006 in London in relation to the gas safety reserve arrangements going forward.

This seminar would therefore be of particular interest to gas customers and market participants. Please forward this on to those people in your businesses or associations that this would be of most interest to.

Further information regarding this meeting will follow shortly. Limited spaces will apply on the day - to register your early interest, please contact wholesale.markets@ofgem.gov.uk.
