

Dear Sir/ Madam,

Mobile phone mast penetration has made me ill, therefore I have now moved to a more suitable location where I am less bombarded with electromagnetic radiation. I will certainly not have any wireless devices installed into my house. Therefore

ONLY wired meters should be introduced to avoid harm and protect the vulnerable. It is against Human Rights to force people sensitive to electromagnetic radiation to have wifi in their homes against their will, and to not even inform them of this fact constitutes `wilful neglect'. If the government insists on making `wireless' meters mandatory, they must prepare themselves for legal challenges in the future.
