

Applaud the proposals to make tariffs and charges more consumer friendly but why do there still have to be standing charges? Why can't it all be rolled into one price? Seems to me standing charges are just another way of bamboozling the consumer. If I buy anything else retail all I need to know is the price of the product per unit including VAT.
Why should energy companies be any different other than to deliberately confuse the consumer?

