Notes on question
Answer	We are not completely clear on what is meant by this question. We have provided a response below but if this does not fully address the question we would be happy to provide further information. Workpackage 2.1 is focussed on reviewing and developing the necessary policies, both technical and commercial required for implementing the ARC project. Workpackage 3.1 will involve the development of the detailed design of the enablers that are required for the project and analysis of how these enablers should be deployed in the future. Both of these work packages are resource intensive activities and we have taken the view of using internal resources to deliver these in order to keep the learning and experience in-house rather than employing a third party. We view this as a strength of the project as it ensures that the learning is embedded within the business rather than upskilling a third party. These work packages are fundamental to the integration of the project into the existing business as without the appropriate policy updates an enduring

	solution is unlikely to be developed. Through formally updating policies, this documentation can also be used for dissemination purposes as it provides working level documentation for other DNOs to apply the learning. These workpackages will be managed in line with the wider management of the project.
