Question	How will you engage with Community Energy Scotland, and what is the nature of the benefits you will deliver to each other?
Notes on question
Answer	Community Energy Scotland (CES) are not a renewable developer. As a registered charity, CES provide practical assistance to communities as well as other small commercial developers on low carbon/green energy development and energy conservation, much in the same way as other charities and consumer focus groups provide independent advice to consumers. We consider that the success of ARC will be the engagement with relevant community stakeholders that include but is not limited to, community councils, local authorities, planner and policy makers and land owners and consider that having CES as a partner will be a benefit in facilitating this engagement process. As a partner, CES will be required to enter into a collaboration agreement with SPD which will outline their responsibilities in line with the project and the necessary terms and conditions will be included to ensure that all LCN funding is utilised by CES in-line with the LCN governance and project direction.
