

I writd to register my objection to the application for the above.

Thd developers havd failed to take due account of the environmental damage that will be caused to the presently unspoilt peatlands where the turbines are to be located.

Having walked some of the hills I can vouch for their unspoilt beauty. For anyone to suggest that the peat is degraded is clearly presenting a falsehood.

I would recommend that anyone responsible for making a decision on this matter should make a site visit to view for themselves the location, and realise it's unsuitability.

I also consider that the estimated development cost is seriously low, and we could end up with an incomplete white elephant.

There are better and cheaper options as a solution for Shetland's energy requirements.

I urge you to refuse the option as presented.
