

Dear Sir/Madam,

I should like to register my objection to having the proposed wind farm belonging to Viking Energy ruining Shetland. I'm not talking about the aesthetics I'm much more interested in keeping the peat conserved. As we all know the peat is a very fragile balancing act between pollution and clean air. The Scottish Government, not long ago, said that these areas should be conserved not raped willy nilly. I'm not being a nimby merely asking you to reconsider as the infrastructure alone will be releasing millions of tons of carbon dioxide, then there is the concrete for the vast footing, actually creating further carbon emissions so I cannot see how doing all this destruction of the environment could ever be called sustainable energy. There was another option put forward for cleaner energy, namely a gas powered power station. Several people have spoken out in favour of this option, I'm talking about people who know what they're talking about so please could this be looked at again before further destruction of the environment, which will be irreversible, is continued. Please ,please, for the future generations, think again, I remain,

Yours Sincerely,
