

To whom it may concern

I am writing to voice my objections to the proposed windfarm in the Shetland Islands. I am concerned about the implications it will have on the wildlife mainly birds in the islands, where the proposed site is a refuge away from houses and roads for many nesting birds and small mammals.

Another concern is the carbon footprint these huge windmills have from start of production to getting them all the way up the hill and in position.

Where some of windmills are going is prone to land slides has that been taken into consideration and what measures are in place to prevent this from affecting them?

I am also concerned about the noise and constant movement of them, my mother's house will look onto several of them and the sun will rise behind them for her and the village I grew up in, will measures be put in place to provide help to the people that suffer ill effects of this?

I do think this wind farm is a big mistake and will ruin our beautiful island.

Yours faithfully
