Subject: Response to Statutory Consultation on the removal of certain RMR Simpler Tariff Choices rules

Good morning,

On the whole Economy Energy are happy with the proposed changes to the removal and amendments regarding certain RMR choices. We agree that it will improve consumer choices, allow for tailored bundles and offers for both new and existing customers as well as being able to reward loyal customers and allowing for a more competitive and innovative market.

One questions we do pose is that with the removal of a single standing charge how will this impact customer's ability to compare across suppliers particularly if prices contains bundles and/or offers? Will it be clearer what element of the estimated costs is for energy and which is for offers/bundles/discounts? Furthermore this would impact the TCR which would be ineffective; however we understand the TCR is currently being discussed in another consultation discussing its removal and therefore may not be a concern.

Kind regards,
