

From: SteveJarvis
Sent: 03 August 2016 17:30
To: Confidencecode <confidencecode@ofgem.gov.uk>
Subject: Price comparison web sites

Hi, I think it is essential that all price comparison web sites are compelled to show information on all the energy provifers in the market. It's only in that context that an average person can have any confidence that they are getting the best deal. It's also the only way they would see what specific providers offer in terms of for example green energy which may not be something sites would show if they did not have to show all providers.

I also don't think it is a good idea to create a database of people who have not changed and then allow unfettered bombardment by companies through junk mail. I've opted out in the mailing preference service and I don't want to be hit by a load of crap. Besides your database will be vulnerable to hacking as I doubt if you will have enough security. That's what reality indicates.

Steve Jarvis